ABSTRACT

The bibliography of approximately 550 entries is a sample of those available on Arizona for elementary school students. Topics include Arizona history and culture, Mexican lore, and information about Navajo Indians. Although some of the titles are too difficult for the reading level of elementary school students, they are included because no other book is available on the topic. Titles are classified in five categories: general information, guide books, cook books, coloring books, and textbooks. For each entry, information is presented on author, title, publisher, distributor, and a brief annotation. A directory of publishers and distributors is presented, followed by a title index which concludes the document. (Author/DB)

FOREWORD

There is always a need for an up-to-date listing of books which provide an avenue to information about Arizona or contribute to a better understanding of its rich history and heritage.

This bibliography of in-print children's books which relate to Arizona may, at the onset, appear extensive; but on closer examination, one will soon become acutely aware of the gaps and the need for good children's books about our state....in almost all categories.

The compiler was faced with many decisions before the preparation of this list: Should books written for the tourist trade be included? Should cookbooks be listed? Should titles of marginal quality be omitted? Are coloring books appropriate for this bibliography? The decision was made to prepare as comprehensive a listing as possible so that one might gain a perspective of the total picture of children's books on Arizona which are available to elementary school libraries today. Inclusion does not indicate that the book is recommended by the Department of Education.

Since many of the books included were published locally, they have not been reviewed in standard review sources. To have included only those reviewed and recommended titles would have resulted in a very limited list. For such a list, school librarians should refer to the recently published Selective Buying Guide to In-Print Children's Books about the Southwest (Southwest Library Association, 1977). The Arizona section includes 67 titles, as compared to this listing of more than 550. In this bibliography, "SWLA" at the end of the annotation indicates that the book is included and recommended in the selective buying guide.

The compiler is prepared for the criticism which will be voiced because a number of titles are obviously too difficult for the reading level of elementary students....but titles on popular subjects have been included when there was no other book available, even though the book was for the adult reader. How could one leave out Clara Tanner's Southwest Indian Painting when it's a classic in its field and when there is absolutely nothing written on the subject for elementary readers? The University of Arizona Press's The Salsbury Story is included, because, unfortunately, Florence Mean's Sagebrush Surgeon is out of print. Many of these titles will rightly belong in the professional and reference sections of the library.

The current Arizona histories are included, as well as the suggested texts. There is a sprinkling of Mexican lore, history, and arts and crafts. Some books are set in New Mexico or Utah, but, of course, the Navajo reservation encompasses territory of three states.

Biographies of our State's historical figures written for the elementary students are limited to a few colorful personalities of national interest, such as Cochise, Fremont, and Geronimo. Charlotte Hornung, Luke School librarian, penned a biography of Frank Luke, after years of querries from her students for more information about the hero for whom their school was named....and no books to which to refer them. Many old standard titles on which we relied are out of print. Prescott Elementary School District finds itself with only one copy of Jeanette Eaton's Buckey O'Neill, out-of-print since 1965.

At a recent library workshop, the manager of Northland Press was asked why the firm did not publish books on Arizona for children....and his immediate reply was "find us some authors". As our population continues to increase and as the number of school and public libraries grows, publishers will surely recognize the potential market and need for children's books on Arizona. In the meantime, it's up to librarians to pressure publishers to look for material on the state for publication and to bring back into print standard titles....and even start researching and writing!

The contribution of the covers from Arizona Highways is greatly appreciated. Librarians should be aware of the Arizona Highways Indexes which have been compiled by the Arizona State Library Association and can be obtained from the State Library and Archives (1700 West Washington, Phoenix 85007). The ten year cumulative index for 1952-1961 and the five year cumulative index for 1962-1966 are each available for $5. The price for each of the annual supplements for the years 1967 through 1977 is $2. The index for the years prior to 1952 is currently out-of-print.

The compiler is grateful to the many who submitted bibliographies of their Arizona and Southwest collections, to the local book dealers who loaned copies for examination, and to the librarians who made suggestions of titles which may have been overlooked.

And last of all, the compiler wishes to express a special "thank you" to her secretary, Sandy DiCello, who had the patience and know-how to put it all together!
